

Golf homes site becoming a big hit

A NEW website, www.golfinghomes.com.au, which exclusively promotes homes that are for sale on a golf course, has started to become a big hit with developers and home buyers alike. Site Founder, Patsi Brown says “traffic and interest in the site has grown dramatically since we launched last year. We’ve been blown away by the feedback received by users over such a short time. We now have many of the major housing developments now listing their stock, which makes it easy for prospective home buyers to search for specific areas of interest and find their dream golf home.”

The site is very user friendly providing search facilities for properties by State, type, golf course or region leading you in most cases directly to the agents web site listing of the property. Imagine the hassle of trying to find a waterfront home in any of our major cities - an exhaustive search of many agents in many suburbs is the only way to do it. And until now, that was the only way to source golf course real estate. IG
